Introduced by Kenneth Frampton,
Ware Professor of Architecture, GSAPP

CHURTICHAGA+QUADRA SALCEDO, was founded in MADRID, Spain 1995. From its foundation this small architecture firm has deliberately rejected specialization, preferring to explore "transfusions" between creative problems.

They have designed large scale projects such as a Sahara City for a petrol company, and various civic buildings such as city halls, embassies, swimming pools, libraries and cultural centers. They also design small scale projects such as kiosks, refuges, and micro scale projects such as boats, furniture, books, typographies...

They have received several awards for their work and have been featured in international publications.
